- Spray and flooding on roads probably making journey times longer

Further details

Rain will spread quickly northeast across much of Northern Ireland this evening, but is expected to be heaviest across parts of south Down, and especially south-facing slopes of the Mournes. Widely 15-25 mm of rain will fall here in a relatively short period of time, with parts of the higher ground in the area seeing 40-50 mm.

Given saturated ground in the area, these sort of totals have the potential to lead to some disruption to transport and utilities.
